Just like you say 'Hello' to friends,
cows say 'MOO' to each other.

एकः सूते सकलम्

A felted illustration on a white background. At the top, a yellow sun with large eyes and a smiling mouth is surrounded by blue, fluffy clouds. Below the sun, a large red circle with white, stylized leaf patterns is centered. At the bottom, two cows are depicted: one with black and white patches and another with brown and white patches. They are standing on a yellow field with small green tufts of grass. The entire scene is framed by a green border.

The ground is not smooth or patchy.

Often Leela would tell Sheela..

“The grass could be green on the other side of the moor, let’s explore Sheela...”

“But what if we do not find our way back home?
No Leela, never be so adventurous.”

Just like us, some cows are more adventurous than others.

One day I saw a lot of flowers in the field. I met Leela.

Cows can spend eight hours of their day just eating and another eight chewing the cud.

NEETU SHARMA is an award winning activity and picture book author-illustrator. She has written and illustrated picture books with short stories where the emphasis is on helping the child read and understand the story independently. She works with various mediums with ease and has several exhibitions to her credit. This detailed book in appliqué is ample testimony to her dexterity in various mediums.

A delightful tale of two friends, Shanti and Anila, who live on yellow, pale meadows. Shanti is a cow and Anila is a goat. They discover where their unique beauty lies and learn to love (and respect) each other along with the story and activities. The book is a treasure which parents and teachers can explain to their young readers and then continue the story...
